February 24, 2022, will live in European history as the day that Putin went all in fanning the flames of war. With a full-fledged military operation ongoing, it seems that peace and stability in Europe is under a considerable threat.

What do events in Eastern Europe mean for Denmark, the European Union and the NATO? When the cannons stop firing, how can we establish dialogue again and rebuild European security architecture? How will the rest of the world react?

Join us in this session led by DIS Faculty and experts from the Danish Foreign Policy Society and the Danish Ministry of Foreign Affairs, who will shed a light on the causes of these events, as well as the likely political, strategic and military fallout for all of us.
